

Ethical Standards

At Laney House Publishing, we believe that great stories are built on trust, respect, and integrity. These principles guide how we work, create, and collaborate.

Our ethical standards reflect who we are and what we stand for: a publishing house that values honesty, craftsmanship, and the enduring power of words.

1. Integrity in Publishing

We are devoted to truth and authenticity in all we publish. Every manuscript, partnership, and promise is handled with honesty and care. Plagiarism, misrepresentation, or deceptive practices have no place here.

2. Respect for Authors and Creators

We honor the creative journey. Every author is treated with fairness, openness, and respect from first submission to final print. We communicate clearly, uphold our commitments, and foster relationships founded on mutual trust.

3. Commitment to Quality

We believe that quality endures. Each work we publish is chosen for its merit, originality, and contribution to the literary landscape. Our goal is to elevate voices that bring depth, imagination, and meaning to readers.

4. Editorial Independence

Our editorial decisions are guided solely by the strength and substance of a work. We maintain full independence in our publishing choices, free from external influence or personal bias.

5. Honest Representation

We present every title truthfully and thoughtfully. From cover design to marketing, we ensure that how a book is represented reflects its spirit, story, and author's intent.

6. Responsibility in Practice

We take pride in working responsibly: reducing waste where we can, supporting our independent artists, and treating every partnership with care for both author and reader.

7. Professional Conduct

We hold ourselves to a standard of professionalism that reflects the integrity of our brand. Courtesy, confidentiality, and respect guide all interactions.

Laney House Publishing stands for literature done right: ethical, faithful, and empowering, in every sense of the word.
